

OXFORD DESIGN

INTERIORS

PRESS COVERAGE

Publication: 27EAST | Date: JULY 2023

2023 Hampton Designer Showhouse Mirrors Today's Tastes

In the world of high style interior design, the longstanding platform of the designer showhouse has traditionally been décor's answer to the fashion runway.

Not only are showhouses effective in allowing people to experience many individual designers' points of view in situ at once, they also provide a showcase for the latest and greatest in products, from furniture, textiles, flooring, wallpapers and lighting to kitchen cabinetry, surface materials, appliances, bath fixtures, fittings, tile and stone. Of interest now, too, are the recent advances in smart home technology that are also seeking exposure, and it becomes apparent that a typical designer showhouse has about a thousand moving parts.

Upstairs, the hero moments are the primary suite by Shannon Wiley of Sea Green Designs, with its pure coastal palette of foggy grays, beiges, blues and greens, further expressed in pale gray walls faux-finished to resemble Venetian plaster. Tate Casper and Jordan Winston, of Tampa-based Oxford Design Studio, went the traditional route with their charming guest bedroom dominated by a metal canopy bed draped in linen and flanked by a pair of marble-topped antique chests. Subtle Rose Tarlow wallpaper lines the entire room, including the ceiling.

Jordan Winston and Tate Casper of Oxford Design Studio in their guest bedroom. DANA SHAW